

Lynn Anderson, In Person

You gave the heart you gave to me in person
You made the vows you made to me in person
Then when your love has lost all its glow you said your friend to let me know
I wish you would have told me so in person
You placed your ring upon my hand in person
You should have got it back again in person
But so afraid my tears will start you said your friend to do your part
You really should have broke my heart in person
If love is gone what I can understand but it hurts so much to hear it second hand
You once appeared at my front door in person
You won't appear there anymore in person
And though you send so what you prove to tell me that our love was true
I know I'll still be missing you in person I know I'll still be missing you in person
