

Maggie Reilly, Memories

(Memories)

(Memories)

Falling through the space between our dreams
Absence is a way to let us know
And never understand what leaving means
But some things have to break and let it go

Memories won't let you run and hide
They always pull you back
Memories won't let you run away

I've been wondering how long it takes
To find forgiveness in a heart
Or if we ever learn from my mistakes
We wind in from the end back to the start

Memories won't let you run and hide
They always pull you back
Memories won't let you run away

We're close
Horizon, take another leap of faith
Just hope our wings don't melt away
It's time for us to turn our faces to the sun
Look into her bright ...

Memories won't let you run and hide
They always pull you back
Memories won't let you run away

Memories won't let you run and hide
They always find you out
Memories won't let you run away

Memories won't let you run and hide
They always pull you back