Maggie Reilly, Sunlight

Sunlight on the water, reflecting in your eyes You smiling move towards me, under those blue skies Waist deep in the water, you lifting up your hand No sun was ever stronger, a golden wonderland

Here in the city, just endless gray No rest, no silence, as you fade away I try to find you in all my dreams Lost illusion, never as it seems

Sunlight fills my mind you're never far away Oh how I long for you Ask me to stay with you forever and a day I'll run to you, I'll run to you

Now time just stands frozen That smile fixed on your face Reflections on the water Two figures lost in space

Here in the city I find no sleep I feel so helpless, I am in too deep I've tried to find you down all the days And you come to haunt me, take my breath away

Sunlight fills my mind you're never far away Oh how I long for you Ask me to stay with you forever and a day I'll run to you, I'll run to you

Now sand and sea still touch me Upon that distant shore You holding out your silence To keep for evermore

Here in the city, I can find no sleep I feel so helpless, I am in too deep I've tried to find you down all the days And you came to haunt me, take my breath away

To take my breath away... Holding out your silence to keep for evermore... Take my breath away...
