

Magnitude 9, What My Eyes Have Seen

I saw the sun today in the usual way but there's been an unseen change and we carry on with our lives, like we'll live forever but the fact remains, we'll continue this way, the only ones to blame it's time to realize, that we're in this together

Flying high above blue skies, on wings we'll never see knowing only for a while, we try to change our minds try to face the truth and open up your eyes

It's a sad disgrace, and we're losing the race our greed has made us blind now we're far beyond our needs and too late to recover

Flying high above blue skies, on wings we'll never see
knowing only for a while, we try to change our minds
try to face the truth and open up your eyes Staring over endless miles, a memory where we have been hoping we'll remember, what our eyes have seen

So the world today, always spinning away while the simple fact remains

That the balance of mankind, will be changed forever how can we, a society, make amends to save our race while we rob our future blind, knowing forever

Can't we remember, we're in this together there will not be another way

Flying high above blue skies, on wings we'll never see
knowing only for a while, we try to change our minds
try to face the truth and open up your eyes Staring over endless miles, a memory where we have been
hoping we'll remember, what our eyes have seen

hoping we'll remember, what our eyes have seen