

Magnum, All That Is Real

Did you ever give all your heart and your soul to something?
Then they're torn up into pieces, one by one
Have you ever considered or promised your faith undying?
Has it ended in a moment for someone?

Because all that is right, all that is real
All that is love, all that you feel
Does not always come true
Does not always come true

Though you look at the things that you did, that have gone before you
And you trust that you won't make the same mistakes
By the time that you realise that you've only gone half through
It's the fool who wins, for you it's just too late

Because all that is right, all that is real
All that is love, all that you feel
Does not always come true
Does not always come true

Ask me for answers, none can be heard
Give me your promise, give me your word

All that is right, all that is real
All that is love, all that you feel
Does not always come true
Does not always come true
