

Majandra Delfino, Oil & Water

He lit the fire in my heart
And with the same flame burnt my world down stark
I gave him the whole entire thing
At first he gently held it and then got bored and started carving

Love, all one needs
What I need is to try healing
And then make sure I never
Fall back into that feeling
Love and I, to one another never truly loyal
We don't mix to well
Love flows like water, I burn like oil
Yet I look around and there is all this water
But none that I should drink
I notice now that I am oil, and oil is all I should think

A tiny pin prick, came little spurts of blood
A little trickle long enough can surely cause the flood
But last night he sped the process
He sliced it open then walked away and cut his losses

Love, all one needs
What I need is to try healing
And then make sure I never
Fall back into that feeling
Love and I, to one another never truly loyal
We don't mix to well
Love flows like water, I slip like oil
Yet I look around and there is all this water
But none that I should drink
I notice now that I am oil, and oil is all I should think

So beautiful and capable of bringing me good news
Now the enemy with knives and pins looking to bruise
You fall out as quickly as you fall in
You never fell at all I was just kidding

Love, all one needs
What I need is to try healing
And then make sure I never
Fall back into that feeling
Love and I, to one another never truly loyal
We don't mix to well
Love flows like water, I burn like oil
Yet I look around and there is all this water
But none that I should drink
I notice now that I am oil, and oil is all I should think
