

Major Deluxe, It

First remember every day you moved in the house
At the other end of the garden
While all this was going on I was just scared (be)cause
It just hadn't happened until then
We really started to feel the stormy sea of change
Hanging on by our fingertips
Bedsits in detail at sixteen and taking a chance
Can't expect to climb anymore lips
I've learned so much just watching there
And when everything began falling into place
To lie in an ambush in my pleasure garden
Sometimes I could even catch your sounds

To embrace the open seas of a fading century
Sure it was always going to be about you
I spend all this years, amazed, idling by a lake
I'm now quite happy, quiet in the passenger seat
Were we on to something?
We still don't have a name for ourselves
Are we still working with more time on our hands?
But I know it's something she can do by herself
She would have done it by now
Trying to leave it behind

R. / Even when I don't understand your words
R. / I still know that it's important to me
R. / I always feel like someone walking around
R. / Blind faith or brave and thunderous modesty
R. / It's important to me
