

Malcolm Middleton, Cold Winter

I'm too cold to be alone this winter, I'm too old to be alone

I just want to hold you this winter, I know you get so cold

I just want to call you this winter

Where are you tonight? Why aren't you here? You should be looking after me this winter, I sure as

Behind everything I do stares the cold truth I don't have you

I still love you, I must be the world's biggest fool

Everyday I wish you weren't so braw coz I miss you

How am I supposed to unmake the world's biggest mistake

I don't want to be your open wound all winter; you don't need to see me cry

I think I need professional help to get better, this may take some time

My life is dead and I can't see a future, I never could and I still can't

Do you still think I'd make a terrible father? I guess his blood still runs in me

Behind everything I do stares the cold truth I don't have you

I still love you, I must be the world's biggest fool

Everyday I wish you weren't so braw coz I miss you

How am I supposed to unmake the world's biggest mistake
