Manfred Mann, Questions

In a dream it would seem
I went to those who close the open door
Turning the key, I sat and spoke to those inside of me

They answered my questions with questions And pointed me into the night Where the moon was a star-painted dancer And the world was just a spectrum of light

They reached to my center of reason And pulled on the touchstone that's there The shock of that light had me reeling And I fell into the depths of despair

They answered my questions with questions And set me to stand on the brink Where the sun and the moon were as brothers And all that was left was to think

They answered my questions with questions And pointed me into the night The power that bore me had left me alone To figure out which way was right