

Mark Lind, Jealousy

You were a spoiled kid from a drugged out town
You took a drag and it dragged you down
No hope can save you now
No one paid a mind to you
Starved for attention, what could you do?
You're fucked up and you're dragging all of us down
Jealousy - you've been falling down
A midlife crisis at 23.
You lit a match to that bridge to me
When you cry I won't hear a sound
Jealousy - you've been falling down
I don't care no more
Jealousy - you've been falling down
Now you're out for this once on your own
You're out there looking for a place to call home
And you're scared cuz there ain't nobody there.
Do you wonder how things might have been
If things went differently back remember when we were friends?
Or do you even care?
Now you're out and you're looking for home
You wait for good times that I hope never come
And I'm scared because I can't stand in the way
If you're out and you're looking for me
If there is something I could get you in need
Call me out
Baby, I'll be there
