Martha Wainwright, Don't Forget

Summer comes and rain falls away But the very next day it seems The snow comes to stay

And you too will go just like the dog days do I'll put on my hat, my gloves, my scarf To keep the cold apart

But there are no hats, gloves, scarves for the heart Just a cold wind that leaves its frosted mark

Don't forget that I will always love you Just a reminder to help you pave your pathway Fall it cools, winter it snows, Spring it rains, summer comes and you go

And in my silly mind I've gotten married to you You're across town, don't even have a clue Or these images that in ten years I'll run into you and fall right back inside of you

Don't forget that I will always love you Just a reminder to help you pave your pathway Fall it cools, winter it snows Spring it rains, summer comes and you go

Don't forget that I will always love you Just a reminder to help you pave your pathway Fall it cools and winter snows Spring it rains, summer comes and you go

So when will we meet next and where will it be? On a platform track in an old movie Cause time moves in circles and can leave you anywhere

Fall it cools and in the winter it snows Spring it rains, summer comes and you go
