

Marty Robbins, Just Like All The Other Times

Just like all the other times you leave
Leavin' me alone here to grieve
Beggin' you to stay but still you go
This time you won't be back, I know

Just like all the other times I cry
At that same old hurt deep down inside
Lonely nights for me are nothin' new
Lonely every night since I've lost you

It's my fault because I've lost
But I just couldn't see
If I'd been the man I should
You'd still be here with me

But, I guess, it's always been this way
When you break a heart you have to pay
Life will be so empty from now on
Just like all the other times you've gone

It's my fault because I've lost
But I just couldn't see
If I'd been the man I should
You'd still be here with me

But, I guess, it's always been this way
When you break a heart you have to pay
Life will be so empty from now on
Just like all the other times you've gone
Just like all the other times you've gone
