

Mason Proper, Lock and Key

We saw the sun was going down through the iron bar spiderwebs they turned the key but we were already dead we were already stone dead We are the wind tonight blowing up blowing down blowing left and right shake shake 'cause we put that chill in your bones tonight take that lock and key and shove it Caught every lightning bug out in the yard not a lone breath leaks the lips as they come to grips with this.
We left them there and drifted west when you and I coalesced Later on, one swore he saw us open the jar all the chemicals luminesce in their chests and shine right through kinda like me and you kinda like me and you do
