

Matilda Mann, The Day That I Met You

The day that I met you they telephoned me just to say that nobody had the time for yesterday and all at once i felt so small started feeling like nobody cared at all but then you called only to say you'll never love somebody else this way and though im still battered and bruised i forgave the world the day that i met you

The people talk its background noise i don't wanna hear nobody else voice theres something sweet about your scent its like lavender it came and never went
