

Matt Pond PA, Fortune Flashlight

fortune - point it out with flashlights underneath the tree limb, hoping that the bough breaks all night - set your heart on all night, the dark no longer scares you, girls to fence the green when you find out how you feel when the rain first hits the fields and you're running for the door because you wanted so much more fall in - board's too weak to stand on as you catch a glimpse of your own eyes crossing the water forward - spilling from the back seat, leading with your best foot behind you onto the pavement you wait too long, you go too far before you've had a chance to start it's all on you and you don't know why turning blue and you don't know why before the time today, you're watching what you say you've lost your only clue, tell me what me what to do

the simple part is I haven't changed everything is not the same'
it's all on you and you don't know why
