Matt Wertz, Yesterday Morning

Yesterday morning every part of her just shut down Getting out of bed never felt so difficult before Every step she took led to the wrong direction And she never made it out her door

Yesterday morning Jamie yielded to all she hates But if she despises it so much why did she give in Seems like this battle just can't be won And she's stuck there alone again.

She said I'm so tired of this stumble that I've been calling a walk And so I'm sick of this mumble that I've described as a talk And now I guess its time I lose myself To the one who has found me here

Yesterday morning every part of her just shut down All that she knew or thought she knew flew out that door Things she loves so easily forgotten Now Jamie can't love no more

She said I'm so tired of this stumble that I've been calling a walk And so I'm sick of this mumble that I've described as a talk And now I guess its time I lose myself To the one who has found me here
