

Mayday Parade, If You Wanted A Song Written A

I'm throwing away pictures that i never should have taken in the first place and it's cold in my apartment as i'm changing all the colors from the brightest reds to grays well it's 3 o'clock on monday morning i'm just hoping you're not seeing his face i've been getting calls in these hotel rooms long enough to know that it was him that took my place and i hope this makes you happy now that the flame we had is burning out and i hope you like your pictures facing down as even broken hearts may have their doubts and i'm burning all the letters hoping that i might forget her and her bad taste that she left when she was leaving me a life of barely breathing as she walked out of this place and you dropped the note and we changed key you changed yourself and i changed me i really didn't see us singing through this then you screamed the bridge and i cried the verse and our chorus came out unrehearsed and you smiled the whole way through it i guess maybe that's what's worse
and i hope this makes you happy now
that the flame we had is burning out
and i hope you like your pictures facing down
as even broken hearts may have their doubts
and i'm taking all your memories off the shelf and i don't need you or anybody else so take a look at me see what you want to see when you get home
take me home
i'd rather die than be with you
take me home
you have a problem with the truth
take me home
because this happens every time i knew it would...
i knew it would...
take me home
i'd rather die than be with you
take me home
you have a problem with the truth
take me home
because this happens every time and i knew it would...
i knew it would...
and i hope this makes you happy now
that the flame we had is burning out
and i hope you like your pictures facing down
as even broken hearts may have their doubts
and i'm taking all your memories off the shelf
and i don't need you or anybody else
so take a look at me
see what you want to see
when you get home