Meg & Dia, Rebecca

Stood by my missus in the lobby Asked to carry bags of Madam Elevators rush to the sea Rummaged through my coat for the key

After tea lounged on the sofa My lady spoke of everyone she knew there She paused, grabbed my wrist, said,"Now, darling, there he is." I looked up. My surroundings stirred and smeared

His eyes calm and distant His mouth so severe Though half his age I was I've never been in love before then

Max, you're so distraught
Perhaps I'll help you out
Your wife was so much more than me
But I can be her now
I can be her now

Rush down the stairs to that man Mr. Summer, he nodded his head With laughter in his eyes a smirk followed close behind We're strangers but I'm sure we should be married

I spoke to my master She nodded her head Though I was young and scared With Max standing there We took our first step

Max, you're so distraught
Perhaps I'll help you out
Your wife was so much more than me
But I can be her now
I can be her now
I can be her now