

Meganoidi, We

In the month of May my point of view suddenly changed (This time)
This time I was more sure that I would be able to hold on, hold onto it
We repeatedly left the same places with more lung capacity, and I stopped a number of times to ke
It was necessary to remember the steps that brought me to those places, memorising every footpri
That day I was probably worrying too much and this understanding brought about my first step (Tha

That day, oh yellow rain on the bay
That day, the same rain through the veins

The night of fires came earlier than usual in the depth of winter
Gathered in the house, the light dim, we talk in whispers, waiting for some good news, listening from Midnight comes, the spirit pushes, and we push just as hard
We run downhill, our shoulders covered by long shadows
But motorbikes are still bicycles, the headlights lanterns
The mountain is turning upside down

That day, oh yellow rain on the slate
Hot slate led the rain through the veins
