Mel Tillis, Unmitigated Gal

Well how can you have the unmitigated gal to come back now expecting me to fall Right down on my knees and kiss your feet yeah feet

Feet that one day went a walkin' out on me with a fast talkin'

Slob you hardly knew his name your mind is de-arranged

And where did you get the backbone and grit to come back now expecting me to fit Right back into plans that we once made

Plans that now are gone forever to return never ever I don't want you anymore So get away from my door

And let me live live and let me live live don't come messing up my life again How can you have the courage and the nerve

To come back now expecting me to love you after the way that you've done me Guess you think that I'm a fool but you're the one that's blew their cool

I don't need you anymore so get away from my door
