Melissa Etheridge, I Take You With Me

Past the devil's own temptation Beyond where angels sleep To the holy invocation Of a neon city street I feel your hand I hold you Through your eyes I see My love, wherever I go I take you with me Down the road of my desires To the oceans of my peace Through the fueling of my fires Until my yearnings cease I hear your voice I know you In your arms I sleep My love, wherever I go I take you with me Even though I've fed my hunger Even though I've named my fear I'll never understand it How the journey led me here But I have made a promise That I intend to keep My love, wherever you go I take you with me