Michael Nesmith, Here I Am

Slowly into winter goes the ash of life Wholly independent windows framing time Downward drops the ridiculing eye so blind Love has conquered once again uneven rhyme

Marie, my sweet Marie Here I am

Holding on to moments meant for each to share Grasping at the veils as they began to tear Wearily the healing comes to lift the care Opening your hand and finding mine still there

Marie, my sweet Marie Here I am

Letting go of a rusty old beginning Turning to the sun

Easily I give you now the thoughts I can Gentle reassurance from a gentle man Toppling the barrier that spoiled the view Let me offer what I've taken back to you

Marie, my sweet Marie Here I am

Here I am
