Michael Nesmith, Yellow Butterfly

The rain falls through Chicago skies People stare and wonder why And somewhere sails a yellow butterfly

A jaguar circles in the night The jungle glistens by moonlight And somewhere sails a yellow butterfly

All in all in all in all Like an island waterfall Days and nights revolve around Her flying, silent sound

Mother wakes and Father turns A candle flame surreally burns And somewhere sails a yellow butterfly

All in all in all in all Like an island waterfall Days and nights revolve around Her flying, silent sound
