

Midnight Fall, I'll Turn The Lights Out, But Only If

The room darkens the stage is set for us to act like movie stars the camera are set on us two actors hopelessly in love the crowd goes silent i say under my breath &quot;say nothing, we both know all the rest&quot;
like clock work
the lights fade in and we wait till we meet again

we exit stage left and right and cross paths only one more time that night i kiss you, you hold your breath encompassed in a dream im wondering whats next the director says aloud
hold your breath
i cant still feel your heart beat ill sweep you off your feet act two comes i walk on stage and see you

you come and talk to me i sing you a song i wrote you close your eyes and sing along i director says hold your breath i can still feel our heart beat i'll sweep you off you feet

i promise i will catch you the perfect chance comes but the hardest part is taking the first step into a new experience but its whast i have to do ill not speak
you silence me with grace ill just breath and stay right where i lay and the director says aloud

hold your breath
i can still feel our heart beat
i'll sweep you off you feet
i promise i will catch you

there was a night it was just you and me the attraction that somehow excaped from my lips right into yours out bodies were closer then two carbon atoms (kiss me, kiss me again, but you wont)