Mike Shinoda, Place To Start

I don't have a leg to stand on spinning like a whirlwind nothing to land on came so far never thought it'd be done now stuck in a holding pattern waiting to come down did somebody else define me can I put the past behind me do I ever have a decision feeling like I'm living in a story already written am I part of a vision / made by somebody else pointing fingers at villains but I'm the villain myself or am I out of conviction with no wind in the sail too focused on the end and simply ready to fail cause I'm tired of the fear that I can't control this I'm tired of feeling like every next step's hopeless I'm tired of being scared what I built might break apart I don't want to know the end all I want is a place to tart