

Milow, Coming of Age

Coming of age aint about what you do
Its giving in to whats predefined
When you trade all your dreams for compromise
It is never what you have in mind
One shot of happy, two shots of sad
Thats how our lives are aligned
The path that you chose has got highs has got lows
But its never what you have in mind
I must say that I still wonder why it disappears
Must say that I still wonder why
The years keep tumbling by
Coming of age aint about who you meet
Its about the people who leave you behind
Your brothers, your parents, your lovers, your friends
It is never what you have in mind
One shot of happy, two shots of sad
We know we might run out of time
But when it comes to living, dying is the easy part
Not exactly what you had in mind
I really doubt that Ill find out why it disappears
I really doubt that Ill find out
What these years are all about
You might ask if these thoughts that I just summed up
Are of any importance to you
Maybe not but when things dont turn out like you planned
It helps to know that they never do
Besides, if each shot of happy
Comes with only two shots of sad
Then coming of age is not so bad
Then coming of age is not so bad
Then coming of age is not so bad