

Monique Whalen, Believe

Is it better to have loved and lost
Than never to have loved at all
Is it better to have your heart ripped out
For a moment of fleeting pleasure
Is it better to stand on the outside always looking in
Is it better to live for the moment and cry out in pain
Is it better to play it safe; to never lose but never gain
Is it better to live on the edge; to gamble with life, to gamble with love

And I can't believe that you can't have both in this life
And I can't believe that there's no room for compromise

But does anything I believe really matter
Does anything matter at all
You know I'm just going to live and die like the rest of you
But in that time I intend to live
I intend to breathe, I intend to see, to do, to be, and I

And I can't believe that you can't have both in this life
And I can't believe that there's no room for compromise

I still get quite scared sometimes
I still get frightened shitless
I still will cry at night

But that doesn't mean that you can't have both in this life
And that doesn't mean that there's no room for compromise

And I feel that I must believe in something
In anything just to survive
So maybe I believe in hopeless causes
Maybe I believe just to believe

And I still believe that you can have both in this life
And I still believe that there's still room for compromise
And I will believe that you can have both in this life
And I will believe that there's still room for compromise

And I feel that I must believe in something
So believe, yeah just believe,
So believe
