

Moonlight Awakening, Autumn Is Dead

It's autumn everywhere, but no one seems to care and if you think about it, it might be fair they say the nightmare's real, they say i shouldn't feel cause all these things about you just as well could disappear.

but here we are again, here we are alone and within this death there lays a hope here we are at last, here i am with you; i'm starting to think it's all too soon.

cause the way that i dont know you, and the way that i move slowly so the sky is turning darker, and my soul is drifting farther.

i dont know what to do, i'm frightened by it too and all your words can't make it better i dont know what to say, i must say i'm afraid and all your words don't make it better.

yet all the leaves that fall are dead, like the worries i once had and everytime i speak your name, i can't help feeling all this shame though all the things i said are true, i can't help drifting far from you i wish it could just stay the same, but so dies love when seasons change.

i dont know what to say, dont know what to do cause everyone says i cant trust you i dont know what to feel, i know that it's unreal when all these things say i can't trust you.

i dont know what to feel, i dont know what to fear i have no courage to speak of here and no one understands, no one really cares and i don't think it's ever fair.

and all the leaves that fall are dead, like the worries i once had
and everytime i speak your name, i can't help feeling all this shame
though all the things i said are true, i can't help drifting far from you I wish it could just stay the same, but so dies love when seasons change.