Moonlight Awakening, Deepest Fear

imagine a world where nothing has changed where it's all the same but everyone is gone.
what would you do with it all?

here's where we're at where we depend on each other but hate each other and anyone who says otherwise is just lying...

i imagine myself
in a world without you where we don't pretend so many things but my deepest fear is clinging onto what there is;

wanting things to perservere, needing you to keep me here.
cause somehow, with all our differences you need me to think like you... and for every dream that tortures me, i'll torture you.