

Murray McLauchlan, As Lonely As You

I think of your room
I think of you there
I think of you dragging you body upstairs
With your bed and your chair
And your stale perfume
I never knew anybody
As lonely as you

Your lovers leave
Before it's daylight
They want it for fun
You want it for life
And you get so angry
If they tell you the truth
I never knew anybody
As lonely as you

In my mind your face disappears
But I still see your eyes
They look like they had heard too many lies
They never seem to look straight into mine
They had nothin' left to lose by wastin' time

I can't stand to see you
I can't look when you cry
I can't help you no how
I'm too selfish to try
I wish there was somethin'
Somebody could do
I never knew anybody
As lonely as you
