

Murray McLauchlan, Whispering Rain

Whispering rain, careless emotion
Rising and falling waves
On the ocean
Carry you on 'til nothing remains
Only the sound of the whispering rain

Life sometimes seems so uncertain
Like a face that you see through a curtain
Like a face without any eyes
Like a kiss that means goodbye
You love or you're left on your own
You think you know but it's all unknown
You think every day is the same
'Til you're washed by the whispering rain

Whispering rain, careless emotion
Rising and falling waves
On the ocean
Carry you on 'til nothing remains
Only the sound of the whispering rain

I will stare like a gypsy
Into the sky
And the moonlight will search into my eyes
'Til the strangest sound is my own name
All inside me is the whispering rain
All the songs that sigh among the trees
All the time that brings you to your knees
People helpless when love came
Lost in the whispering rain

Whispering rain, careless emotion
Rising and falling waves
On the ocean
Carry you on 'til nothing remains
Only the sound of the whispering rain
Only the sound of the whispering rain
Only the sound of the whispering rain
