Newcomer Carrie, This Long

I don't know why I can't say no I guess I should But I can't let go Anyday I'll be all right But not tonight

But come away from the window and close the blind And sleep on the couch when the bed's too wide Who said you could keep this heart of mine

Who said you could keep this heart of mine

This long This long So long

There's a quiet in this room

The TV don't fill

And I know I'll be better soon

But come away from the window and close the blind And sleep on the couch when the bed's too wide Who said you could keep this heart of mine

This long This long So long

And there's a bitter taste in my mouth That's salt and spice and sweet With one last sigh the leaves let go And fall down to the street Not much to say so I won't call

Don't even want to try

And I'll make some sense of it all

But come away from the window and close the blind And sleep on the couch when the bed's too wide Who said you could keep this heart of mine

This long So long
