

Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, Modern Day Romance

We met on the highway, she flagged me down, had a flat on her Stingray with nobody around I helped her out, she said climb in so I ditched my ol truck just to see where the party would end.
We spent the weekend in Reno in the honeymoon suite, never saw the casino, barely took time to eat.
I never dreamed she would take me this far but by Sunday that lady had taken a hold of my heart.
it's a modern day romance, a new kind of game with no time to slow dance in the fast lane.
I tried to love her without any strings but a modern day romance has left me some old-fashioned pain.
she never said good-bye, just a note by the phone said "thanks for the good times, but it's time to move on."
well I'm out here walkin' with my thumb in the air wondering where she might've gone and why I even care.
it's a modern day romance; old fashioned pain
