

Noctes, Butterfly

The sunlight sky is fading, in different shades of dark
A spellbound day has ceased, and drowned within the past
The mighty sun is dying, the fairness tears apart.
Those silent days are over and disappears within the dark

Tones from spheres pulsating, the darkest eve arise
The gleaming sun is drowning in ancient lakes of time
Alone I watch the sunset, pale and dead inside
The sunlit sky is fading, and just like me it dies

A lightning stream of sunlight is brightening up the dark
The dawn of a new beginning as I wake up once again
Kissed by holy sunshine, blessed with sin I'm raising
Over dewdrowned fields I soar, a godless butterfly

A sparkling ray so bright, with sacred angel flies
Through dreams that's fed with light, where daylight never dies

A butterfly, a holy one a spark within the dark
I dare the night, I soar with thee
U dream the sights, you'll never see

Kissed by holy sunshine, blessed with sin I'm raising
Over dewdrowned fields I soar, a godless butterfly

But dreams are never true, I'm back were I began
Where daylight fades to dusk and darkness overwhelms
I wish my dreams were real, but life is not to be that harmless butterfly, that dies inside of me