Noumena, Here We Lie

Morning bleeds me pale Words feel so numb I'm frozen in a place of time I'm stuck to where I left

A modest wish has come true A thought I never meant For a light that was so bright The night sets forever

Turn your face towards the one that's deranged Tell me the truth, I'm not here For a light that was so bright The night sets forever

So jaded, I am here And again, filled with grief For a light that was so bright The night sets forever

In my chamber of liquid dreams The one I feel, the one I beseech Hunt for life for a non-divine The anguish leads to the world I entreat

Here we lie in silent breeze In this vault it makes me feel How my world is shred by grief How this thing just should not be
