

Omnium Gatherum, The Emptiness Of Spirit

How many paths must a man walk down until you call him a man - and if it isn't good i understand - with different rights - the days to settle down, to hear what's going low - there's a bitter old ghost and a side trail every morning - how many paths must a man walk down until you call him a man - and when it comes to this - easily for those with beer, honey - waiting - the days to settle down, to hear what's going low - and it's in the wind - the spirit blowing the answer to an asshole's face - not to swear for nothing, in synchronicity that's even still perfect - there's a bitter old ghost and a side trail every morning