

Ozma, Continental Drift

i'm bored, you're boarding the 504 out of town it's late, so look straight, don't pull your eyes off the ground you sit and wait across the gate, the minutes stretch themselves so long you'll never be my destiny, because my destination's wrong right coast, left coast drifting round and round

i'm lost, always, and i know i can't be found who made these customs i can't seem to get past? it's no use, since you've been born into a higher class when i want you, and only you, somehow your baggage comes along and it never stops, no, it never stops, until i'm back where i belong right coast, wrong coast

drifting round and round
i'm lost, always, and i know i can't be found

you can't see me across this great divide i'm lost, always, if i'm not right by your side back where i belong

back where i belong