

Pale Forest, Bedlam Friends

I'm clinging to the red drapes while listening to eaten tapes
The footsteps booming in my ear every second a hundred years

The walls are tall and white plenty of room to fly my kite My skin is slick and yellow
I can see you little fellow

Little insect on my pillow
you may try to run away
But the birds up in the willow will eat you up if you don't stay

I have a little friend in you and I know you like me too Crawling beneath the yellow sheets caressing me with all eight feet

Little insect on my pillow
But the birds up in the willow
will eat you up if you don't stay
