

Patty Loveless, Over My Shoulder

Over my shoulder
My heart expects to see you running after me calling out my name
Over my shoulder
There's a coat you used to wrap me in to keep me warm
to keep me near
And though the clouds still hang around me like my stormy love for you
The rain is falling softer now
The sun is breaking through

Over my shoulder
I see a rainbow
And is it heaven's way of saying
I can let you go
And tomorrow morning
I'll be one day older
And you will be
A memory
One last look
Over my shoulder

Over my shoulder
There's some words I said I wish I hold back again
But it's out of my hands
Over my shoulders
Of the shadow of our love keeps reaching out for me
It won't set me free
With every step I ask myself
Which way should I go
It's hard to find your way across
A bridge that's burning slow

Over my shoulder
I see a rainbow
And is it heaven's way of saying
I can let you go
And tomorrow morning
I'll be one day older
And you will be
A memory
One last look
Over my shoulder
