

Paul Colman, Always (Forever)

Should my heart ever stop
Should my breath give in
Should my mind lose its every thought
Should the world never turn
Should this whole thing end
Should I lose every war I've fought

Whatever part of me is left after it's over
Come and hide it under your wings

You are forever
And I am a moment
You are forever
Without you I am passing with the wind
So take me with you always

Should my body break down
Should my dreams fail
Should this freedom I know escape
Should the ones that I love be torn away
Should this night never turn to day