

Pennywise, Homesick

I walk down my old street Used to be home for me and now there's spraypaint on the walls I see a house that at one time looked nice but now it is abandoned There's nothing left at all
So why, why must we let our chances fly
When oh when oh will we ever see hope again
Why, why, why is it hard to say goodbye Well oh well oh at least I can still remember when our city used to be such a beautiful place Now you can't walk down the street the same and think you'll see the same My hands are in the air
It makes no sense to me
I cannot explain this tragedy
My first trip to city I remember thinking that the buildings stood so tall and when I see that my old stomping ground is just a ravaged they seem so small now rather feel like I'm living in someone else's-dream It doesn't seem this is the way that things should be it's like a dark cloud swallowed up humanity Whatever it is it is be-yond-me Homesickness is the flu that surrounds me
A virus spreading through the street
It astounds me
Homesickness
