

Pestilence, Malleus Maleficarum / Anthropomorpha

Scientists have been researching for decennaries
The possibilities of genetic manipulation
Division of cells and degrading tests
Helped them to create total perfection

Dividing kernels, control cellulation
Splitting up tissue, superior creation
Accurate puncture, making dissection
Their only goal, no imperfection

Metaboletica, changing cell structure
Leading to clones, rule over life and death
Nobody thinks about the wretchedness of a failure
Suppose it is terror to which they will give breath

The artificial awaken grafting is germinating
Taking the distinguishing human marks
Anatomical deformed, anthropomorphic
A monstrosity with growing pains in the dark
Yet the creature shouldn't be metabolic
De-evolution, vicious degeneration
Half man, half animal, jellyish shining skin
Science's urge brought us an abstraction

Brainless, cannibalistic, threat to mankind
Who gave him life at the same time
The result of medical experiments
The horror uncaged, raging its violence

Anthropomorpha, changing cell structure
Lead to disaster, brought us only death
Nobody thought about the wretchedness of a failure
Now it is terror to which they've given breath
