Peter Hammill, A Perfect Date

A perfect date to hesitate, I hope it won't be too long.

You're a sucker for the punch and the telegraph bells are ringing; now it's coming to the crunch as you stumble on the Jaffa Gate. I think you know how it happens on the stage when the heavenly choir are singing you've been taken by a perfect date.

You made the Mount of Venus your Jerusalem, you're marking time as symbol for debate; you hope to find some moment close to infinite, you hope to find a perfect date.

A perfect date to hesitate. The future beckons us on. There comes a time to hesitate I hope it won't be too long.

You're a sucker for the punch and the telegraph bells are ringing; now it's coming to the crunch as you stumble on the Jaffa Gate. I think you know how it happens on the stage when the heavenly choir are singing yeah, you've been taken by a perfect date.

You've been playing on a hunch and the strings of your heart are zinging. Yeah, you cut loose from the bunch but that doesn't mean you've sealed your fate. I think you know how it happens, though it's strange, when the choir start singing: you've been taken by a perfect date.
