

PFR, Them

And the band marches on and on and on without slowing
And their leader leads them on and on and on without knowing Never looking back to see the mess that they had left behind

The media mediates
between the masses and the myth it creates But it never knows the damage grows the more
it bends the truth

They tell us what they want us to hear
They patronize our aching ears

It's all too clear the wealths of violence
and sexual perversion Offer more than just some innocent
psychological diversion They have left so many bleeding needing help from Christ the king

We don't have to watch what they want us to see Yet we've let them bind our hands and feet

How can you say, "let's all remain unaffected," when No lines were drawn, the band just marches on And they forget you when you fall down
