

Picture House, It's Not Too Late

(BROWNE)

Picking up all the pieces
Because you never thought that this life
Could treat you this rough
You say that there's no point in going out again
You say this life may have done you wrong
But then wear it as your winter coat to keep you warm
You know that there's no point in staying in again

CHORUS

It's not too late to be trying to save your love again
It's not too late to be trying to save your love again
You know you can't hide yourself away

Time passes slow now
And there's only one thing you can do to let it all out
And if you fail well who can blame a trier

CHORUS

You got to wait till your turn
It's all right
Far over time
Waiting on fuel for your flame
Until you find yourself again

It's not too late to be trying to save your love again
You know you can't hide yourself away
You can't hide yourself away
