

Planes Mistaken For Stars, Dancing On The Face

put your hands all over me let it burn, let it seethe let it stain, let it bleed it's just a reminder that we both hurt more than we care to remember it's just a reminder that this will hurt more than we'll care to remember drink from the whisky on my lips to kill the indifference we'll tear at every inch that we can get until we're begging for a looser fit the truth lies where ugly loses innocence the love is gone but our bodies are still warm the truth lies where anger loses etiquette I'll meet you there if you can stomach it
let it burn, let it seethe
you'll stab with searing eyes, I'll fall to the door you drown in my seas, I've starved at your shore
