

Polaris At Noon, Liberty

I can't forget all of the times I've looked away from you
Never had the courage to smile
But I'm sounding so irrelevant
You will find me hiding and harboring my secrets that never had the courage to fly
I'm starting to reciprocate

And I don't mind the silence
I open up my ears and I hear a little voice in me try
To yell out "I'm so worn" and that I'm torn in two

Maybe I'm done writing you off
I've found my own liberty now I'm free
Done running away from my hopes and fears
Forever it seemed it was out of reach
And even when you had the means just to seal me off
You didn't say what you needed to say
Well I've worked far too hard for this now just to run away

Sounds like regret but in reality I'm doing fine
Am I just lying to myself?
And I'm sounding so confused about what it means to truly find love and real peace of mind
Somehow its become just like hell
But I'm starting my correction

And I don't mind the silence
I open up my ears and I hear a little voice in me try
To yell out "I'm so worn" and that I'm torn in two

Maybe I'm done writing you off
I've found my own liberty now I'm free
Done running away from my hopes and fears
Forever it seemed it was out of reach
And even when you had the means just to seal me off
You didn't say what you needed to say
Well I've worked far too hard for this now just to run away

Maybe I'm done writing you off
I've found my own liberty now I'm free
Done running away from my hopes and fears
Forever it seemed it was out of reach
And even when you had the means just to seal me off
You didn't say what you needed to say
Well I've worked far too hard for this now just to run away

Maybe I'm done writing you off
I've found my own liberty now I'm free
Done running away from my hopes and fears
Forever it seemed it was out of reach
And even when you had the means just to seal me off
You didn't say what you needed to say
Well I've worked far too hard for this now just to run away