</lyrics>

Fluttering a playful dance,
The swallowtail showed herself.
In the middle of a summer's night, under the moon.
With joyous yellows and solemn encircling blues,

Her pitch-black wings resemble the edge of the world.

I asked a traveler, "How far are you traveling? And when will your journey end?"
The traveler answered, "There is no end to my journey, but I can make it end."

"Oh Bye, then. Take care," I said as I sent him off long ago.
Returning here is no longer possible.
It wasn't until now that I finally realized the traveler was really me all along.

I met you, and that should have been enough.
Light filled my world.
I should have been happy just to see you in my dreams.
But then I wished for your love.
The world changed its face.
At the edge of the world, the sky and sea meld together.

It is impossible to know the meaning of a poem by reading just one word.
But if you can do this, then I would like to send it to you.

If this were a play, what a horrible story it would be.
That is because I am unable to proceed or retreat,
It is merely a play with one character standing still.

If you wish, you can have my body.
I will always offer it to you.
I will become the shoulder for the flying sparks of fire.
There is just one last fist-full of my feelings left.
Please rescue it and lay it inside my heart.

I met you, and that should have been enough.
Light filled my world.
I should have been happy just to see you in my dreams.
But then I wished for your love.
The world changed its face.
At the edge of the world, the sky and sea meld together.

A swallowtail bloomed in the wilderness.
Beyond the flickering scenery,
There is an oasis which I cannot approach.
Please give me a drink of water.
And if you can, please love me.
Please rest your wings on my shoulder
