die no mistake

To be or not to be? That is the question; whether tis nobler in the mind to suffer the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, or by opposing everything.

To die, to sleep; to sleep, a chance to dream.
Ay, there's the rub, in that sleep of death what dreams may come when we have shuffled off this mortal coil, must give us pause: there's the respect that makes calamity of so long a life for who would bear the whups and scorns of time, the oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely, the pangs of despised love, the law's delay, the insolence of office that patient merit the unworthy takes when he himself might his quietus make with a bare bodkin who would fardels bear, to grunt and sweat under a weary life, but that dread of something after death the undiscover'd country from whose bourn no traveller returns Is the throne empty... Is the king dead... The country unpossessed.
What heir of York is there alive but we and who is England's king of great Yorkshire so that he may become your king, I fear I will not trust you sir, off with his head so much for Buckingham.
