</lyrics>

Once upon a time, when we were much younger
More than anything, we looked for the sunset

The two of us riding bikes
We were laughing at each other until we got bored
I loved watching her waving hair

The madder red that tingered her cheek made me feel like patting her tiny back
We could understand each other
More than words, feelings became a rainbow crossing far beyond the sky.

We ran everyday, somehow forgetting that time passed
It's strange. We both grew up a little bit.
Shoulders side by side in dawn

We lay down and watched the stars
We talked about the boyfriends that we loved so much

Don't forget these, distant memories
Remembering makes us smile
You won't know even if we're coming apart
Let's write a letter to see her again, saying the same thing.

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.
Friday, Saturday and Sunday too, always together

The madder red that tingered her cheek made me feel like patting her tiny back
We could understand each other
More than words, feelings became a rainbow crossing far beyond the sky.

Don't forget these, distant memories
Remembering makes us smile
You won't know even if we're coming apart
Let's write a letter to see her again, saying the same thing.
